The Formation of Urban Space from a Sociological Perspective: Discussion from Hongkong to the Mainland

Liu Zuyun

Abstract: Based on the neo-Marxist urban space theory and the analysis of the present situation of urban space in Hongkong, the paper argues that both the segregation and the polarization in the space are the main manifestations of urban spatial inequality, the operating logic of capital and power is also the logic of generating urban spatial inequality. Then based on a sociological perspective and the analysis of the present situation of urban construction in the mainland China, the paper puts forward two prospects of avoiding social segregation and highlighting space sharing. In order to achieve the two prospects, on the one hand, we should be fully aware of the living property and social property of cities and make efforts to expand the public space and improve the public level; on the other hand we should be fully aware of the living property and social property of housing, regulate the differentiation of the rich and the poor and avoid the housing segregation.

Keywords: the formation of urban space; the social segregation of space; the spatial polarization between the rich and the poor
