The Construction of a Development-oriented Institution of Volunteer Service Records in China — An Analysis from the Perspective of Rational

Shi Congmei Huang Gang

Abstract: The institution of volunteer service records is such an important part of the volunteer service institution that improvements and innovations in the institution of volunteer service records is of positive significance to the systemization of volunteer service in China. Currently, the study on the institution of volunteer service records in China is largely limited to empirical studies while few theoretical studies have been conducted on that. The present study, based on the theory of rational choice institutionalism, analyzes the drawbacks in previous regional practice as well as the potential conflicts, adjustment and cooperation between regional and national institutions of volunteer service records. Finally, by avoiding the defects and obstacles in regional practice, the article suggests predictive paths for the construction of China's development-oriented institution of volunteer service records.

Keywords: development-oriented; institution of volunteer service records; rational choice institutionalism
